MESSAGES FROM MR. MCLAREN

The warmer weather seems to be upon us again. It is a timely reminder that the children often take off jumpers etc and forget to collect them at the end of recess or lunch. If all articles are labelled, including hats. It will help with the return of lost property.

Absenteeism

I ask that if your child is absent from school that there must be a note sent; or an entry into a diary; or at least a phone call, explaining the absence. This is a legal requirement by the Department of Education and Childhood Development.

Active After Schools Program

The active After Schools Program will commence again next week. Tee Ball/ softball will be on Tuesday nights and Cricket is on Wednesday night. Liam Millard is the coach for the cricket. We are yet to be advised of the coach!
Each of the sessions will begin at 3:40 - 4:40 for seven weeks
Enrolment forms are available from the office

Work around the school continues > the main building is currently getting gutter guards installed. This will certainly cut down our maintenance with keeping the gutters clear.

Enhancing Reading Comprehension at home

General things to consider:

Review/make sure your child has knowledge of the following vocabulary:

Author	Illustrator	Beginning/Middle/End	Character
Predict	Inferences	Schema/ Connections	Problem/Solution
Theme	Summarize	Visualizations	Character Traits
Settings	Conclusion

Prior to opening a brand new book:

- talk about the title, author and illustrations on the cover
- questions such as: Who is the author of this book? Who is the illustrator? What predictions can you make about this story from the cover? Read the back passage, table of contents, chapter titles and discuss what inferences they can make from what they're read.

As you are reading the book:

- At appropriate points in the book stop and ask your child to visualize what they think might happen next. "Can you put a picture in your head of what you think might happen?" or "can you make a prediction (guess) of what might happen next?" or when you as a parent are reading, your child could take the time to draw a picture of their visualization from the story on paper
- Take opportunities to study a picture or think about information given in the text and ask "what inferences (guesses) can you make from this picture/these words/these information?"
- build in "stop and think" points to check understanding as you read (use post-it notes to mark the spots where the child should do this if they are reading a chapter book....you may require them to come discuss the book with you when they get to these points).
- discuss character traits (personality of character). Teachers often ask questions such as "What character traits made Rainbow Fish such a good friend?" or "Compare Paul Bunyan and Johnny Appleseed's character traits". A response such as "when Rainbow decided to share his scales we learned that he is a good friend because friends share" is ideal. Or, "we know both Johnny Appleseed and Paul Bunyan were strong characters because they both walked hundreds of miles". Or, simply saying "tell me about THE BFG's character traits" is also great practice!
- Talk about schema, which means your prior knowledge. "How does your schema help you understand how the character is feeling?" or "How does your schema help you predict what might happen next?" An appropriate response might be "well, when my friend didn't want to play with me at recess yesterday, I felt really sad just like ____ did", or "when I went on my first airplane ride, I felt really scared, that's why I think ____ may be scared".
- Talk about connections. Teachers often talk about text-to-text connections, text-to-self connections and text-to-world connections.
 - Text-to-text connection questions could sound like this: "does this remind you of another book you've read?" or as you're reading Margaret Wild books you could comment "these illustrations in Woolvs in the Sitee remind me of the illustrations in her other book Jenny Angel"
 - Text-to-self connection questions could sound like this "Can you ever remember a time when you were too sick to go to school like (character's name)?" or "Can you remember a time that we were at a place like the Sleeping Bear Dunes?" (if reading the Legend of the Sleeping Bear Dunes), etc.

At the end of picture books or chapters:

- Ask your child to summarize (tell the most important parts) the chapter or story.
"Could you summarize what happened in this chapter?" (don't be afraid to help them....this is a tough task)
"So, what happened at the conclusion (end) of the story?"
What were your favorite parts of the book/the most exciting part of the book?
What is the theme of this book? Which means, "what could you learn from this book?" or "what is the author's message?" or "what does the author want you to learn?"

We hope you find these tips useful.
